I have a 6 year old Chihuahua, his name is Bullet. He has suffered from pancreatitis before (2 years ago) . We brought him into the vet to get him on a flea medication preventative. The vet recommended bravecto. In being trusting of our vet we didn't research it before giving it to go.

What a mistake that turned into, the very next day my boy didn't want to eat much. He is usually finicky. So I made him chicken and rice even that he didn't care much for. We knew instantly to bring him in. The vet said my baby came down with HGE. Which didn't sit right with us because Bullet hadn't been able to poop. He was very constipated.

5 days after taking Bravecto we woke up to Bullet shaking and breathing rapidly. He was on fire. I knew right away to get him into the emergency pet hospital. He is now fighting for his life in iv fluids and flushing his system.

The vet at the hospital says she is making a claim against Bravecto through merck. She says he does have liver damage now and it shouldn't be an issue but now bullet will need to be on Densonyl for the rest of his life. I feel horrible for giving this flea medication to my dog. I hope someone reads this and decides not to give it to their dog.

Update on Bullet: he unfortunately has to stay another day in the hospital. The hospital made the claim to Bravecto and Bravecto is covering the cost of blood work and analysis. I'm sorry about your pup I just really hope we are able to stop someone for giving it to theirs. I wish I would have come across your page before this.

After we did the 4 day over night treatment to flush his system and replenish his enzymes and fluids he was able to come home.

They told us the next 72 hours is critical and he could begin having seizures. He didn't thankfully. We got an ultra sound done about two weeks ago, he now permanently has liver damage, and has to be on Desonyl and we give him milk thistle daily. He also has to be on vet prescribed for food due to his liver issues. His skin issues are also gone.

We did blood work for him last week and his red and white blood cells went back to normal. They want us to come back once a month for next three months for follow up blood work.
