Flossie before she got Bravecto

Marie Miskella – 17 juni 2016

On the 17th of March I gave my dog Bravecto chew. 3 days later I found her scratching her stomach which had become raw.

The rash spread to her thighs under her front legs and all over her head with a lot of hair loss.

She had a very high fever and was burning to the touch

A foul smelling mucus continuously oozed from her sores and when she shook her head blood was discharged from the sores. She must have lost a lot of blood over the couple of weeks.

During all of this she drank excessive amounts of water and ate very little. Vets gave her injections to help with her appetite, she was also treated with antibiotics, steroids and washes. At this stage she was constantly with the vets.

On the 9th of April Flossie lost her brave battle.

Of course I have no proof but the chew was the only thing different in her life.

After Bravecto

Flossie was a healthy 10 year old Springer Spaniel x Cavalier King Charles. In her last 2 days she became very weak and unresponsive and staggered as if she was drunk.

I will never forgive myself for not doing my research before giving her the chew, causing her such needless pain and suffering.

Unfortunately I found this wonderful site too late (Does Bravecto Kill Dogs). Her Vet did report it to M.S.D. Ireland, it was also reported to E.M.A., she is listed on the E.M.A. report no:873 as possible.

The images show Flossie before and after taking the chew.
